

Let's travel
back in time...

Montana 83 Collection

MONTANA

...to a simpler

time when fashion

dared to be bold.

This collection brings our rich history of climbers and mountaineers into the modern day; reflecting the spirit of the age perfectly.

The Montana 83 Collection harks back to the glory days.

Jaw dropping limestone rock formations like Blackleaf Canyon in Montana became home to a new climbing culture. A time when free climbing, multi-pitched sport climbing and bouldering became incredibly popular.

It was an era when it was okay to be bold, outrageous and carefree. Young adventurers gathering at the base of the rock face, sharing stories, achievements, summits and unclimbed routes.

This collection restores to life the gear those adventurers and pioneers would have worn.

Gear they would've relied on for the approach to the climb, the long walk in and out, the packing and unpacking of vans and pick-up trucks full of rope and racks of gear.

Clothing that would have kept them warm, when belaying, hiking in, camping under the stars but would still look good in the local bar.

We see it as a throw back to a chilled scene in the mountains.

Inspired by pioneers.

MINDFULLY MADE

At Craghoppers we believe in global thoughtfulness.

Doing what we can, when we can,
to look after the planet.

It means we're committed to creating great products in a sustainable way.

Its not a new thing, being green is stitched into our DNA. We've always believed that our customers should be able to adventure without impacting the environment and we've done our very best to help them do so.

We're by no means eco-warriors but we do believe in the fight to save our planet.

So, our aim is to minimise our environmental footprint, as far as we reasonably can and to make positive progress every year.
